1. Please provide a brief description of scholar’s planned program activities and research at Pepperdine:

As a top-ranked dispute resolution program at U.S. law schools, the Straus Institute helps international legal professionals to learn about the US legal culture of litigation, negotiation, mediation, arbitration, and other dispute resolution skills. Our program highlights the understanding of conflict resolution from a U.S. perspective but also features presentations and faculty with an international perspective. The scholar will join in our featured alternative dispute resolution classes and also our programming in US Legal English, as well as the professional trainings. The scholar will also have access to the law school faculty and library to conduct research that is helpful to their work in their country of origin.

2. Please list the cultural activities that Pepperdine has arranged for the scholar to experience during the program. Examples might include holiday gatherings, trips to sporting events, volunteering events, or the opportunity for the scholar to make a presentation about their home country’s culture in the community.

Cultural activities include experiential learning classes in which visitors interact with students and faculty from all over the world. Visiting researchers are invited to participate the professional trainings, student-led conferences, and forums with scholars from across the US to dialogue on the latest dispute resolution developments. Researchers are invited to professors' homes for special events and holidays and invited to join student field trips to dispute resolution centers, courts, volunteering, clinics, and invited to present their culture in Diversity Week activities.
